WORDS OF MEDITATION

“Faith is the art of holding on to things your reason has once accepted, in spite of your changing moods.”

- C. S. Lewis

PRACTICE

This week, ponder over the fears, doubts, and troubles in your life by writing them down. Perhaps journaling on why you struggle. Think about the ways that God has surpassed your expectations in previous situations that you have overcome in life. Now go back to those struggles to see where you can see the light in your life.

REFLECTION

Genesis 18:1-15

In Genesis 18:1–15, Abraham and Sarah receive unexpected visitors who bring an even more unexpected promise: Sarah will bear a son in her old age. The story reminds us that God often works beyond the limits we place on what is possible. Sarah’s laughter reveals both her doubt and the deep longing she may have carried for years. Yet God does not withdraw the promise because of her skepticism; instead, God responds with a question that echoes throughout Scripture: “Is anything too wonderful for the Lord?” This passage invites us to consider where we have given up hope or assumed that certain possibilities are beyond reach. God’s faithfulness is not constrained by human timelines, circumstances, or expectations. Even when we struggle to believe, God continues to call us toward trust in the new things God is bringing to life.

DISCUSSION

1. Where in your life do you find yourself laughing like Sarah—not because you are joyful, but because God’s promise seems too surprising or too good to be true?
2. How do you distinguish between healthy skepticism and a lack of trust in God?
3. Sarah denied laughing because she was afraid. How does fear sometimes affect our honesty with God or others?
