Week 4

WORDS OF MEDITATION

"We can never judge the lives of others, because each person knows only their own pain and renunciation. It's one thing to feel that you are on the right path, but it's another to think that yours is the only path."

- Paulo Coelho

PRACTICE

This week, before you respond to someone who frustrates or disappoints you, pause and pray, "Jesus, help me see this person the way you see them—and help me see myself honestly too." Spend a few moments each evening asking God to reveal any "logs" in your own life, receiving God's grace before extending that same grace to others.

REFLECTION

Luke 6:37-42

Jesus challenges us to examine our own hearts before focusing on the shortcomings of others. His invitation is not meant to shame us but to free us from the exhausting cycle of comparison, judgment, and self-righteousness. As we become honest about our own need for grace, we discover that Christ's mercy is greater than our failures and more powerful than our insecurities. Through God's love, we are reminded that our identity is not defined by our mistakes or by the opinions of others, but by the compassion and forgiveness God extends to us. From that place of grace, we are better able to offer patience, understanding, and mercy to those around us. When we receive the loving gaze of Christ, we are transformed into people who reflect that same love in the world.

DISCUSSION

1. What does Jesus mean by "the measure you give will be the measure you get back"?
2. Why is self-examination necessary before correcting someone else?
3. What "logs" might God be inviting you to acknowledge in your own life?
4. Tell a time when you have been judged unfairly? How did that experience shape you?
5. Why do you think Jesus begins with "Do not judge" instead of "Love your neighbor"?
6. Have you ever discovered that something you criticized in someone else was also present in your own life?
