

Bible Reading Plan - Week 3

Day 1

John 21:6

After the resurrection, Jesus appears to His disciples on the shore while they're out fishing. They've gone back to what's familiar, perhaps unsure of what's next. All night they catch nothing—until Jesus tells them to throw their nets on the other side. Suddenly, the nets are overflowing. God was moving, even in their confusion and exhaustion. When they come to shore, Jesus restores Peter, who had denied Him, asking three times, "Do you love me?" and commissioning him, "Feed my sheep." Believers may admire Jesus' resurrection power, but followers go all in by responding to His personal call to mission. John 21 reminds us that Jesus meets us where we are—disappointed, uncertain, even ashamed—and invites us back into His purpose. His movement in our lives always begins with love and leads to action.

- Where in my life might I have "gone fishing," returning to what's comfortable instead of following Jesus forward?
- How is Jesus calling me—like Peter—to respond to His love with renewed purpose?
- What would it look like for me to trust that God is still moving, even when I can't see what's next?
- Ask Jesus to meet you where you are, restore your heart, and help you go all in by following His call to love, serve, and join His ongoing movement in the world.

Day 2

Acts 2:1-21

On the day of Pentecost, the disciples were gathered together—waiting, praying, uncertain about what was next. Then suddenly, the Holy Spirit filled the room like a rushing wind, resting on each of them like tongues of fire. The same followers who once hid in fear now spoke boldly in every language, declaring the wonders of God. This was the moment the Church was born—God moving in His people to reach the world. Believers may know about the Spirit, but followers go all in by living empowered by Him. Peter stood and preached with confidence, and thousands were drawn to faith. When God moves, He doesn't just stir hearts—He launches lives into mission. The same Spirit who moved at Pentecost still moves today, calling us to step forward in courage, unity, and purpose for the glory of Jesus.

- How do I see evidence of the Holy Spirit moving in and around my life right now?
- What fears or hesitations might be keeping me from stepping into the mission God has for me?
- How can I open myself more fully to the Spirit's power and let Him move through me to reach others?
- Ask God to fill you afresh with His Spirit so you can join His movement with courage, boldness, and love—living as His witness wherever He leads.

Day 3

Acts 2:22-41

After the Holy Spirit fills the believers at Pentecost, Peter stands before the crowd and boldly proclaims the gospel. Just weeks earlier, he had denied even knowing Jesus—but now, empowered by the Spirit, he declares that Jesus was crucified, raised, and exalted as Lord and Messiah. God was moving—not only through Peter's words, but in the hearts of everyone listening. The crowd was "cut to the heart" and asked, "What shall we do?" Peter replied, "Repent and be baptized... and you will receive the gift of the Holy Spirit." Believers may know the story of Jesus, but followers respond to it—going all in by turning from sin, embracing forgiveness, and joining God's movement in the world. That day, three thousand people did just that. When God moves, He transforms ordinary lives into living testimonies of His grace.

- How has God transformed my heart like He did for those who heard Peter's message?
- What step of obedience—repentance, baptism, or bold witness—might God be calling me to take next?
- How can I join in God's movement by sharing His truth and hope with others around me?
- Ask God to renew your heart with the same conviction and courage seen at Pentecost, empowering you to go all in with His mission to bring others to new life in Jesus.

Day 4

Acts 2:42–47

After the Holy Spirit's outpouring at Pentecost, the early believers didn't just experience a moment—they built a movement. Acts 2:42–47 describes a community fully devoted to God and one another. They devoted themselves to teaching, fellowship, prayer, and generosity. They worshiped with joy, shared everything, and met needs freely. This wasn't just religion—it was relationship. Believers may attend church, but followers go all in by living as the Church. God was moving through their unity and love, and the result was powerful: "The Lord added to their number daily those who were being saved." When God moves in His people, He moves through His people—transforming their hearts, their communities, and the world around them. The same Spirit who built that first church is still calling us to be part of His living, loving, moving body today.

- Which part of this early church's devotion—teaching, fellowship, prayer, or generosity—do I most need to grow in?
- How is God calling me to be part of His movement, not just a spectator of it?
- What would it look like for my faith community to reflect the unity, joy, and generosity described here?
- Ask God to help you go all in by living as part of His movement—devoted to His Word, His people, and His mission—so that others might see His love through you.

Day 5

Acts 1:1–11

Acts 1 marks the transition from Jesus' earthly ministry to the Church's Spirit-empowered mission. Before ascending to heaven, Jesus tells His followers, "You will receive power when the Holy Spirit comes on you; and you will be my witnesses... to the ends of the earth." God was about to move in a new way—through His people. But first, they had to wait and prepare. Believers may admire God's promises, but followers go all in by trusting His timing and stepping into His mission when He says go. The disciples didn't yet understand how everything would unfold, but they gathered in unity and prayer, ready for whatever God would do next. Acts 1 reminds us that God's movement begins in hearts that are surrendered, expectant, and available. The same Spirit that launched the early church is still empowering God's people today to carry His love to the world.

- Where might God be asking me to wait patiently and prayerfully for His timing instead of rushing ahead?
- How can I prepare my heart to be ready when God moves, like the disciples waiting for the Spirit?
- What does it look like for me to live as a witness to God's power and love in my daily life?
- Ask God to make you ready and willing to join His movement—to wait when He says wait, to go when He says go, and to live as His witness wherever He leads.
