A Word From the Pastor

“When one has read a book, I think there is nothing so nice as discussing it with someone else”- C.S. Lewis

Last year, I wrote an article where I presented a few of my favorite books that I would recommend for all believers. I mentioned in that article that at the beginning of each year, I would provide a list of books from the previous year that would be beneficial and edifying for you in the new year. So, here are my favorite books from 2025 for your 2026.

My first recommendation is Apologetics for an Ever-Changing Culture by Sean McDowell. Apologetics is a branch of Christian ministry devoted to defending our faith and engaging the world with our faith. In this book, McDowell examines current cultural movements and presents methods that will help Christians engage the world successfully. Works such as this are greatly needed at this point in church history. The world is evolving. Cultures are evolving. The church must be aware of those evolutions so that we might engage the culture faithfully with the gospel.

My second recommendation is Jesus the Great Philosopher by Jonathan Pennington. Pennington is a professor of New Testament Studies at the seminary I study at. In this book, he demonstrates that the early church understood Jesus to be a philosopher. During that time, philosophers were regarded as teachers of wisdom. They taught their disciples how to live wisely in the world. This is one aspect of Jesus’ life that needs to be recovered by the church, as Pennington argues. Jesus is not only our ticket to heaven. He presents a wholistic way of living in light of God’s reign as Creator and King. This book is a wonderful place to rediscover these beautiful truths.

Thirdly, I would recommend a book titled Small Teaching by James Lang. Sunday school teachers and teachers in general will find this book helpful. Lang’s goal is to provide teachers with “small but powerful modifications” that they can make in their classrooms. Possibly more than anything else in their classrooms, teachers want their lessons to stick. We want students, no matter their age, to remember and understand what we teach. This book is a great resource in this regard.

Lastly, my favorite book from 2025 is Compelling Community by Mark Dever and Jamie Dunlop. The subtitle of this book is “Where God’s Power Makes a Church Attractive.” These authors do a fantastic job of exploring this concept. In reading this book, my confidence in the Lord’s provision for His church has found renewal. If you want to learn more about what God’s church is called to be, this is a great starting place.

In many of his works, St. Augustine of Hippo emphasized that knowledge should not stop in the brain. Knowledge, rightly utilized, is food for the heart. My prayer is that we would all use our time in 2026 to grow in knowledge so that our minds and hearts might be renewed. May the Lord bless you in this endeavor this year.

-Pastor Andy
