Diary of an American Exorcist by Fr. Rossetti

Diary of an American Exorcist by Fr. Stephen Rossetti offers a rare, behind-the-scenes look into the real-life ministry of exorcism in the United States, blending gripping true accounts with deep spiritual insight. Fr. Rossetti shares powerful stories of deliverance while highlighting the Church's timeless teaching on the reality of evil and the power of Christ's victory. This book is both sobering and inspiring, making it a must-read for those seeking to understand spiritual warfare in our modern world.

AM I WILLING TO STAND FOR THE TRUTH

By Rev. Mr. Robert Grizzell

Luke 12:49-53 is a challenging passage in which Jesus says He came to bring fire to the earth and division rather than peace. We understand that the “fire” is the purifying flame of the Holy Spirit and the truth of the Gospel, which burns away what is false and calls us to wholehearted discipleship. In the culture of the ancient world—especially in Jewish society—family loyalty was the foundation of life, yet Jesus warned that even the closest relationships could be tested when it came to following Him. The Gospel was never meant to be a comfortable cultural ornament; it was, and still is, a radical call to choose God above all else. For early Christians, this meant being willing to stand apart from their own kin if their loyalty to Christ was challenged—a reality that still echoes in the life of the Church today.

In American culture today, where personal comfort and avoiding conflict often take priority, Jesus' words are equally confronting. Our society values keeping peace by “not rocking the boat,” yet the Gospel calls us to speak truth even when it costs us popularity or harmony. We hold dear our heritage, community, and family bonds, yet we are also reminded that our ultimate allegiance is to Christ. In both our roots and American context, we are invited to carry the fire of faith into a world that may resist it—living as witnesses who challenge the darkness rather than blend into it. This can mean confronting moral compromises, standing up for the vulnerable, and remaining faithful to God's commands when society encourages the opposite.

Reflection Questions:

1. When have I avoided speaking or living the truth of the Gospel because I feared causing division or discomfort?
2. How can I let the “fire” of Christ's love purify my own life so that I can be a clearer witness to others?
