BRING JOY IN THIS ADVENT SEASON

By Rev. Robert Grizzell

This Third Sunday of Advent, traditionally called Gaudete Sunday, invites us to rejoice—not because all is perfect, but because God is near. In the Gospel, John the Baptist, now imprisoned, sends his disciples to ask Jesus, “Are you the one who is to come?” It is a deeply human moment of uncertainty and longing. Jesus responds not with grand declarations, but with the evidence of God’s transformative work: the blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the poor hear good news. His message is clear—God’s kingdom is breaking into the world in ways both gentle and powerful, often through healing, mercy, and renewed hope.

For us at St. Jude the Apostle, this Sunday encourages a joy rooted in faith, not circumstance.

Like John, we may have moments of doubt or seasons where God feels distant. Yet Christ reminds us to look for signs of His presence in our daily lives—small healings, quiet graces, and moments when kindness breaks through. Advent joy is not loud or fleeting; it is steady, grounded in the truth that the Lord is already at work among us and will come again in fullness. As we continue our preparation for Christmas, we are invited to open our hearts to this hope-filled joy.

Reflection Questions

1. Where do I see signs of God’s healing, mercy, or presence in my life right now, even if they seem small?
2. How can I cultivate a deeper sense of joy rooted in faith as I prepare for the coming of Christ?
